 - ii. Traders came around to buy things at a cheap rate and sold them at high price.

Long Answer Type Questions

1. What problems did shifting cultivators face under British rule? [NCERT]

- i. The lives of the tribal people depended on free movement within forest and on being able to use the land and forests for growing their crops.
 - ii. But when British brought changes in forest laws, their life was badly affected.
- iii. The British extended their control over all forests and declared that forests were state property.
- iv. Some forests were classified as reserved forest where these people were not allowed.
- v. As a result, many jhum cultivators were forced to move to other areas in search of work and livelihood.

2. What accounts for the anger of the tribal against the dikus? [NCERT]

- i. The tribals wanted to drive out dikus: missionaries, moneylenders, Hindu landlords and the government officials because they regarded all these forces as the cause of the misery the Munda people were suffering.
- ii. The land policies of the British were destroying their traditional land system, Hindu landlords and moneylenders were taking over their land and missionaries were criticising their traditional culture.
- 3. What was Birsa's vision of a golden age? Why do you think such as vision appealed to the people of the region? [NCERT]
- i. Birsa was deeply influenced by many of the ideas that he came in touch with, in his growing-up years.
 - ii. His movement was aimed at reforming tribal society.
- iii. He urged the Mundas to give up drinking liquor, clean their village and stop believing in witchcraft and sorcery.
- iv. He talked of a golden age in the past—a Satyug when the Mundas lived a good life, constructed embankments, tapped natural springs, planted trees and practised cultivation to earn their living.
 - v. They did not kill their brethren and relatives.
- vi. They lived honestly. He wanted to restore their glorious past. Such a vision appealed to the people of the region because they wanted to lead a happy and free life.

4. Why was the Birsa Movement significant?

The Birsa movement was significant in two ways:

- i. First: It forced the colonial government to introduce laws so that the land of tribals could not be easily taken over by dikus.
- ii. Second: It showed once again that the tribal people had the capacity to protest against injustice and express their anger against colonial rule. They did this in their own specific way, inventing their own rituals and symbols of struggle.

5. Briefly explain the land settlements introduced by the British.

- i. The British wanted a regular revenue source for the state and they introduced land settlements.
- ii. They measured the land, defined the rights of each individual to that land and fixed the revenue demand for the state.
