Long Answer Type Questions

1. What is the problem with the periodisation of Indian history that James Mill offers?

i. James Mill, a Scottish economist divided the Indian history into three periods – Hindu, Muslim and British.

ii. This division had its own problem. Before the British came to India, Hindu and Muslim despots ruled the country. It is difficult to refer to any period of history as 'Hindu' or 'Muslim' because a variety of faiths existed simultaneously in these periods.

to do so is to suggest that the lives and practices of the others do not really matter.

iv. We should remember that even rulers in ancient India did not all share the same faith.

2. Why are official records important for British administration?

i. The official records are important for the British administration as they believed that the act of writing was important.

ii. Every instruction, plant, policy decision, agreement, investigation was clearly written up.

iii. They produced an administrative culture of memos, notings and reports.

iv. The British felt that all important documents and letters needed to be carefully preserved.

v. For that, specialised institutions like archives and museums besides records rooms were established.

3. Why is British period in India referred to as 'Colonial'?

i. During this period British came to conquer the country and establish their rule, subjugating local nawabs and rajas.

ii. They established control over the economy and society, collected revenue to meet all their expenses.

iii. British brought goods they wanted at low prices, produced crops they needed for export.

iv. They also brought about changes in values and tasks, customs and practices.

v. When the subjugation of one powerful country over a weaker country leads to political, economics, social and cultural changes, we refer to this process as 'colonisation'.

4. Why did the practice of surveying become common under British Administration?

i. The British believed that a country had to be property known before it could be effectively administered.

ii. Detailed surveys were carried to map the entire country.

iii. In the villages surveys were conducted.

iv. The effort was to know the topography, the soil quality, the flora, the fauna, the local histories and the cropping pattern to administer the region.

v. Even census operations were held every ten years.

vi. There were many other surveys like botanical surveys, zoological surveys, archaeological surveys, anthropological surveys and for est surveys.
