Supplementary Reader

Soul of the Chapter

The narrator's grandfather loved animals. He had his own private zoo. He bought a baby monkey from a tonga-driver and named it Toto. He wanted Toto to add to his collection for the zoo. The narrator's grandmother did not like his pets. So, Toto's presence was kept a secret.

Toto was a mischievous monkey. It was kept in a little closet which opened into the narrator's room. Toto tore off author's school blazer. He peeled off the plaster too. Toto was kept with other animals. There he did not allow them to live peacefully. The grandfather had to collect his pension from Saharanpur. He took Toto with him. He had to pay extra fare for Toto. Toto was ultimately accepted by the family. He was put into a stable with Nana, the family donkey. Toto teased Nana. As a result, Toto and Nana never became friends.

Once Toto nearly boiled himself alive. He used to take bath in warm water. One day, a large kitchen kettle had been left on fire to boil water for tea. Toto entered the kettle. Soon the water began to boil. Toto raised himself. It was cold outside. He sat down again. He continued hopping up and down till grandmother came to rescue him. Toto did not give up his mischiefs. He tore things to pieces. He tore up the dresses of the aunt. He broke plates and utensils. One day he entered the dining room and ran out with a plate of pulao. After finishing the pulao, he threw the plate at the grandmother. Toto caused much loss to the family. They could not tolerate him anymore. In frustration, grandfather sold Toto back to the tonga-driver and heaved a sigh of relief.

Long Answer Questions

1. Give a brief description of Toto, the monkey.

Toto was a pretty monkey. His bright eyes sparkled with mischief. His teeth were pearly white. His hands always looked dried up. His fingers were quick and wicked. He had a long tail which he used as his third hand. His long tail added to his beauty. He was just like a naughty child. He was always looking for pranks. He enjoyed upsetting everything. Once a large kettle containing water had been left on the fire to prepare tea. Toto removed the lid and got into the kettle. Grandmother saw it and saved him. He never let his companions in peace. He often frightened people by either grinning or by throwing things at them. Toto was really an adventurous monkey.

2. Why was Toto's presence kept a secret? Where was he kept during this period? How did he behave? What does it tell about the character of grandfather? Do you think we should keep something secret from the family?

Grandmother always fussed whenever a new bird or animal was brought in the house. Grandfather decided that Toto's presence would be kept secret from her until she was in a good mood. Grandfather kept Toto in author's bedroom's closet. He completely ruined the closet. He turned the author's school blazer into shreds. He was transferred to a cage in the servants' quarters. Toto did not allow any of his companions to sleep at night. Grandfather was an animal lover. But he cared for his family too. He did not want to annoy grandmother. It is not good to keep a secret from the family but sometimes we have to do this for their own good.

- 3. Give a brief character sketch of author's grandfather describing his qualities. What values are reflected from his character?

The grandfather was an animal lover. He was an untrained zoologist. He had made his own private zoo in his house. He was very kind towards birds and animals. Whenever he came across any animal, he would buy it at any cost, if he liked it. Sometimes he had to bear the anger of the grandmother. He was a person of strong determination. Once he bought a monkey and named it Toto. Toto troubled him in his zoo, made him pay extra fare but still he loved Toto. Love for animals, determination, good sense of humour are some of the qualities that are reflected in his character.

- 4. How was Toto an expensive deal for grandfather? Do you think it was a lesson for grandfather?

Since his arrival, Toto started damaging the house and the things in it. He pulled out the peg, tore wall papers, ruined the closet and tore the author's blazer into rags. While going to Saharanpur, at the railway station, he had to pay fare for Toto too. The grandfather thought that Toto would adjust with other animals in the zoo but it never happened. Then, the grandfather realised that it was not a very good deal. He found the Tonga driver and sold Toto back to him. Yes, I think it was a lesson for grandfather to learn that animals should not be tamed. They can live happily only in the natural habitat. They prove expensive if we act against the law of nature.

- 5. In the story 'The Adventures of Toto' we get a very clear idea of the author's grandparents and their habits and natures. While his grandfather was an animal lover, his grandmother had other qualities. Make a character study of Grandmother in the light of the above remark.

Grandmother lived in a large bungalow with a variety of animals that grandfather kept as pets in the servants' quarters. She being a tolerant person, had allowed animals to be on the premises but not in the main house. She was a proud homemaker and had papered cupboards with ornamental paper. She accepted grandfather's ways and finally allowed Toto to be lodged with Nana the family donkey. Grandmother had an innovative streak and provided the monkey warm water for a bath which had become a great source of fun for the animal. Her sharp presence of mind had rescued the animal from being sunk when Toto had plunged into boiling water. She was a good cook and generous hostess and served biryani in special plates at her table. Thus when Toto broke her precious china, grandfather realized that her patience had been severely tested and wisely disposed off Toto.

6. Do you think, it is advisable to keep a monkey like Toto as part of pets in the house? Why/Why not?

No, it is not advisable to have a pet like Toto. Toto was a naughty monkey. Such an animal may harm the children at home and may damage the things around him. It may hurt the guests too. Moreover, animals remain happy in their natural surroundings. The wilds are always beautiful in the lap of the wild as they are born free and brought up in that environment. In the context of the story, Toto was devoted to mischiefs due to its instincts. It was impossible for the family to afford the frequent loss caused by Toto. Moreover, he kept disturbing other pets in the house. They are happy to be free. We must not hunt or catch animals for our selfish motives. Some animals may prove dangerous too.

7. Do you have a pet? Describe your pet and compare it with Toto, the monkey.

Yes, I have a pet. It is a dog. It is also very naughty but not as mischievous as Toto. Its name is Puffy. It was only a month old when I brought it home. In the beginning, it caused a lot of trouble for us but gradually it improved. We provided him training as well. It does not damage the objects around him. He plays with his toys only. He is very friendly with our guests too. He can differentiate between knows and strangers. Puffy is like a member of our family. He is very active and vigilant. He is an epitome of loyalty. He keeps sitting beside the main gate at night. When Puffy is there, no intruder can dare enter the house. He is very powerful. We feel secure in his presence. I pray to God to keep him healthy.
